...e have been a great many ...devised for financing the ...a Chamber of Commerce. ...epend on dues alone, leav... ...to the generosity and civic ...usness of each member to determine the amount. Some use a plural system of membership with a level charge for dues and a graduate service charge. Some try to budget the requirements of the coming year and go out for subscriptions adequate to cover them. These and many other ideas are combined and interchanged to fit the needs of the community. The plan we are using we feel best suits the situation here. That is, minimum dues of $20 a year with the understanding that the larger enterprises will pay more in proportion as their volume and earnings are above the average of the business district. We are glad to say that most of the larger institutions have met this responsibility but a few are content to pay the minimum dues. Anything that we can do to arouse the civic consciousness of these slackers will redound to the financial benefit of the organization. We feel that instead of trying to budget and thus anticipate the requirements of the coming year it is better to wait until the need for an expenditure arises and then go to the members for a special subscription to meet it. This is a little more expensive and troublesome than having money in hand in advance but we find that most folks prefer to know just how their money is to be applied rather than to create a fund over which they have no direct control. We used this plan in financing the electric sign on the highway with good results and we believe that any needed improvement coming within the scope of the Chamber of Commerce operations will be readily financed by our members.

The present scale of dues will do little more than meet the operating expenses and ordinary demands upon the treasury.

Probably the largest and most important project which our organization has furthered is that of harbor development. This was begun early in 1925 and carried over into last year. A supplementary report was prepared and filed with the resident U. S. Army Engineer Major Schulp and his report is now in the hands of the Army Engineers at Washington. With Senator Shortridge and Congressman Free and Welsh as well as Mrs. Kahn on the job, all of whom are familiar with and interested in the project, we feel confident the matter will have due consideraion in the Rivers and Harbors Committee providing the engineer's report is favorable.

From now on this matter will rest in the hands of the municipal authorities as it is with the city government that the federal officers will deal in arranging to finance the development decided upon.

The project of harbor development on the scale contemplated is a large one for a community of our size and will require almost unanimous sanction from the population to be successful. Unfortunately some of our men have not yet seen the vision which harbor development suggests or are not able to submerge their individual and immediate interest in the good. Time, no doubt, will bring to this all important development the interest and support it deserves.

The publication of a descriptive booklet was another matter held over from last year. Your board first negotiated with a firm in San Francisco who proposed to publish an elaborate art booklet. We accepted the services of a man whom they recommended to perform the literary work and prepare the copy for the printer. After paying him $200 we became dissatisfied with the progress made and dispensed with his services. We were not able to obtain the copy we had paid him to prepare and were obliged to begin all over again with the $200 a total loss.

We then engaged Mr. Sam Winkebleck of our city to prepare an art folder and engaged the Carlisle Co. of San Francisco to publish it. We arranged with the publishers to hold the edition in storage and deliver and bill them to us as required. We have taken delivery of 7000 copies of which 1700 copies have been sold in quantities to realtors and others for distribution. Last September we engaged Mr. Jay Wellington to produce the extravaganza "A Night in Dreamland," the proceeds of which amounted to about $225, this was applied to the account as well as -313.77 from the treasury. Our obligation to Carlisle Co., is to draw the remainder of the folders and pay for them as fast as the income will permit.

In March of last year we inaugurated a series of weekly luncheons on Mondays which were well attended and brought the membership together in a pleasant way for the discussion of community business. These were discontinued during the summer vacation period and resumed afterwards every two weeks until the end of the year. We recommend that these gatherings be resumed in some form as soon as convenient.

In addition to the projects already mentioned we were successful in the following:

Conducted a campaign to carry a bond election for the purpose of opening Broadway, which was successful, and we will soon see this main artery across the town extended to intersect the route of the new Bay Shore Highway.

Urged the improvement of Phelps street and supported the City Board in their effort to bring about this much needed improvement.

Suggested that the street signs painted on the curbs in the residence district be renewed, which was done.

Held a dinner on August 6 for the purpose of organizing a Merchants' Association, which was duly formed and is now functioning.

Urged the completion of the De Las Pulgas road and kept a committee on the project throughout the year. This addition to our highway system is very much needed and we hope that the coming year will see it put through.

Assisted in gathering and shipping the county exhibit to the State Lair in Sacramento.

Succeeded in having a new map of the city prepared and used the plates to have a supply printed for the Chamber of Commerce office, these have been much appreciated by those who found themselves in need of such information.

We joined with the City Board in urging the Southern Pacific R. R. Co. to repair the Broadway crossing and are glad to say that this troublesome spot has been put in permanent repair.

We assisted in entertaining the visitors to the National Editorial Association in San Francisco. A caravan of cars provided by our members carried a group of them to our city and points of interest. Much publicity resulted from their visit.

In May the Oakland Tribune offered us an evening on their broadcasting station KLX. A number of our most talented and eloquent citizens including Mr. Otis Carrington and his Choral Class from the High School presented a program which told something of our location, history, progress and advantages to a listening world.

In May we placed an entry in the Fiesta de las Rosas in San Jose but our expenditure of $127.45 for the purpose was so inadequate that we found ourselves much outclassed by entries costing several hundreds, if not thousands, of dollars. The conclusion is that it hardly pays to enter into an event of that kind unless funds are available to make a creditable showing.

A subscription of $300 was raised and disbursed by our organization at the suggestion of the Real Estate Board, to send our local athlete, Miss Alda Silva to compete for the National Javelin Throwing Championship at the Sesqu-Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia. Miss Silva failed to win first place, but made a creditable showing. Our contribution to this fund was $115.

Early in the year an appeal was made for better support of the Post Office in the purchase of stamps. Thanks to your response, the sales for last year entitle this office to the rank of first class. This will bring more frequent deliveries and better service generally, as well as better salaries for the postmaster and his assistant.

Our attention was directed to the chrysanthemum shipping business of Redwood City, which is probably the only enterprise of its kind in the country. In the past year the blooms were loaded into erpress cars in Redwood City instead of being delivered to San Francisco for shipment as in former years. With the assistance of Mr. Fleming of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce we endeavored to interest some of the moving picture concerns in presenting the scenes of picking, packing and shipping these flowers, in their news reels. But for the fact that the day set occurred after the big football game and all the operators had worked all night preparing the reels of that event we would have been able to present this novel enterprise to the world securing much publicity for our town. We recommend that this be arranged earlier in the year and carried out durig the coming chrysanthemum season.

Death Takes Pioneer

John F. Ford Is Called

After an illness of several months, John F. Ford, one of the oldest residents of this county, passed away at his home on Winslow street early yesterday afternoon. His death followed a serious operation several weeks ago which, in his weakened condition, he never fully recovered from.

The deceased is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ford, by two sons, Percy E. and Ray E. Long, and a daughter, Mrs. H. O. Williams, all of this city. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Masonic Temple, and will be conducted by Redwood City Lodge, No. 168, F. A. M., of which he had been a member for many years.

Mr. Ford is one of the pioneers of Redwood City, coming here as a child from Boston with his parents in 1855. He has resided in Redwood City longer than any other person with the sole exception of Chase Littlejohn who was born here in 1853. Mr. Ford's parens moved to Searsville in 1857 where the elder Ford conducted a blacksmith shop for several years and returning to Redwood City in the early sixties to engage in the blacksmithing business. The block of land on Broadway, running from the office of the Times-Gazette to Washington street was formerly owned by the Ford estate. For many years the Ford shop, located on the corner of the block, was the stamping ground for all the farmers in the locality.

At an early age John F. Ford learned the printer's trade in the office of the Times-Gazette and rose to a reporter and became a writer of some note. It was while thus occupied that he met Fremont Older, now editor of the San Francisco Call, who was then a typesetter on the Times-Gazette. Both became fast friends and that friendship has grown with years. Older never comes to town without seeing his quondam friend. They often met and talked over the times when they worked side by side on the case in the office of the Times-Gazette.

In 1877 Ford began his career as a hunter of seals in the northern seas, an occupation he followed for many years with success. He made seventeen trips for the fur seal which took him to the Behring Sea and the coast of Japan, and also to southern waters. Ford became and expert shot and a seal hunter of skill and ability. The seal was shot from an open boat, and in this difficult and trying position Ford always got his seal, few getting away from him. At the end of the season his catch was always the largest and most valuable. He made big sums in the sea trips. Ford would leave Redwood City early in the spring and return in the fall to spend the winter in Redwood City.

Mr. Ford has written narratives of these trips for the papers in years gone by and these articles were always read with interest. He knew the haunts and habits of the seal as did not other man that hunted them. He studied them and knew their traits and knew when and how to hunt them.

Mr. Ford was a member of the San Francisco fire department for some years and was a member of the state militia for ten years. He made every effort to secure a captaincy in the army during the Spanish-American war but failed on account of some trifling physical disability.

For 12 years Mr. Ford conducted a taxi business in this city. This he sold just a year ago. During this time he made a record of having driven 360,000 miles with only two slight accidents.

BUILDING BOOM AT SAN CARLOS GARDENS

The desirable location of San Carlos Gardens on the Highway, close to the Southern Pacific Station has attracted many home builders and lot buyers. It is especially appealing to home builders. The prices of the lots are low, far lower than similarly located lots in the older communities. As many as ten different builders are operating there and various types of houses are being erected—so that gives the home buyer a variety of choice. As fast as the houses are built they are sold. It is a matter of comment that the majority of the sales have been made to local people.

Death of Percy Selby Causes Great Sorrow

In the passing of Percy Walker Selby there is removed from this earthly sphere a well-known figure, a man of prominence in the social and business affairs whose family is indeligly identified with the history of the state and particularly the peninsula where the deceased passed the greater portion of his life. His death caused profound sorrow among his vast circle of friends throughout the state.

Mr. Selby was born in San Francisco sixty-two years ago. He was tenderly raised and well-educated, being a graduate of Harvard and also of a prominent institution of learning in Europe. Mr. Selby was fluuent in three languages and was a mathematician of ability and a skilled Shakesperian scholar.

His father, the late Thomas Selby, was mayor of San Francisco in the early seventies. He organized the Selby Smelting Works across the bay in Alameda County. The elder Selby came down the peninsula in 1865 buying the well-known Selby ranch, consistig of 480 acres. The ranch was the pride of the former mayor. He erected a tight board fence around the property, which he painted white, that attracted attenion of all passing the property. On this vast ranch Young Selby spent his boyhood, growing to manhood there.

It was on this holding that General Fremont camped in 1855, while on his way from Monterey to the Presidio in San Francisco. In this expedition was one John McEvoy. The two men were so favorably impressed with the surroundings that they agreed to purchase the property thereabouts when they arrived in the city. Fremont failed to keep his pact with McEvoy, but the latter returned and bought 480 acres known as the McEvoy tract, near Redwood City. The other 480 acres close by was later purchased by Selby. About that time Faxon Atherton became possessor of a 1000 acre of land lying to the south, so that these three holdings composed all the land on the right side of the present state highway between Redwood City and Menlo Park. When the original owners passed away the vast estates were subdivided and sold by their children. The Athertons and Selby families intermarried. Percy Selby married the beautiful Mrs. Macondray, who was formerly Alena Atherton. They had two pretty daughters, Mrs. Carmen Selby Johnston, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Jane Selby Hunt, of Pebble Beach, Monterey County. The late Faxon Atherton married Miss Jennie Selby.

Percy Selby was the last o fhis immediate family. His two sisters, Mrs. Faxon Atherton and Miss Annie Selby, passed away some time ago. His brother, Ralph, died over twenty years ago. His half-sister, Mrs. Ralston, now 84 years, lives in Oakland.

Mr. Selby in his youth had political aspirations. At the age of twenty-one, he made the run for the assembly in San Mateo County on the Democratic ticket, Mr. Selby being always an ardent Democrat. He was defeated by his Republican opponent, the late W. Z. Price. Selby made a splendid canvass, but the county being overwhelmingly Republican, he went down to defeat. After that race Mr. Selby was never again identified with politics, though often implored to become a candidate for office.

Mr. Selby had splendid foresight in the purchase of real estate. He might be termed the first subdivider of the peninsula, having engaged in opening tracts of land in small tracts in the nineties. His first enterprise was the subdividing of the Easton property, now Lomita Park. He opened the North Fair Oaks tract and Watlington Park subdivision and other large holdings. Mr. Selby was a keen real estate operator, making vast sums in all his big deals.

When the big Selby holdings at Atherton were divided among the various heirs several years ago, Mr. Selby retired from active business, and from the gay life of society, and went ito retirement in Redwood City, where he lived quietly until the time of his death last Saturday at the community hospital, where he had been taken a short time before his demise.

The funeral on Monday was private, only relatives and a few friends attending. The cortege of the capitalist and society leader was over the Dumbarton bridge to Oakland. Interment was in Mountain View Cemetery. This was the first funeral over the new span.

The Selby family are indelibly identified with the early history of the lower end of the peninsula, the deceased playinge no littl part. Mr. Selby, his father, was one of the most prominent men of his time in California. He leaves an impression upon the early history of San Francisco. The name Selby will always be cherished in the state and particularly so in San Mateo County, where three generations of the family have resided.

News of Selbys death served to revive scores of vivid memories concerning his "good fellow" days in ultra-fashionable society about club firesides last night. And about virtually all of them there was more than a touch of the adventurous and of the character of the real sportsman.

On one occasion, it was remembered, he undertook a "match walk" of 115 miles from the Burlingame Country Club to Monterey against Dr. W. A. McEnery of London, a fellow golfer and polo player.

He next set California society sportsmen agog by successfully riding a horse to Paso Robles and return in nine days, a distance of 500 miles, in order to prove to Burlingame army officers that the Roosevelt army riding test of thirty miles a day for three days wasn't at all strenuous. Incidentally, he won a bet of $1000 from a club skeptic by so doing.

At another time he put to sea in a tiny cockleshell named the Morning Star, in company with Cyril Tobin and George Parsons, fellow poloists, and sailed successfully over night to Santa Cruz, though it was unusually rough outside and though club associates of the trio got haggard with worry before the craft turned up in port.

Selby's family came to California in '49 day, and was among the first of the early families of the State to amass a fortune.

The Federal district court, Sacramento, failed to act on the proceedings. Sheets states he followed the advice of the attorney general in asking that the action be dropped.

Siskiyou county's last stage coach has heard the siren call of Hollywood and has turned a deaf ear. A subscription of $250 was raised among the merchants and professional men of Yreka recently to keep it in the county, where it may be available for use in pageants, and celebrations of pioneer days. There formerly were thirty-five stages in Yreka alone, used in arduous trips in all directions but the coming of the locomotive and motor bus relegated them to the scrap heap as curios.

Among the new projects to be undertaken by the chamber of commerce at Colusa this year will be a water and sewer district. District Attorney Harmon Albery is now working out a plan to put this project across. At present the town has no sewer system with the exception of the one used by the Hotel Arbuckle, to which the main business district is connected. Septic tanks and cesspools are the only other methods for disposal available.

A decrease of from 5 to 10 per cent in the price of staple products during the last six months is reported by State Purchasing Agent W. G. McMillan in his semi-annual report handed to Governor C. C. Young. The purchases made by McMillan range from frankfurters to shoe laces, but eastern tanners were the only out-of-town industries patronized. They offered leather 4 to 5 cents per pound cheaper than coast concerns, he said.

Fires in California in forests, brush, grass, hay and grain, cost the state $2,000,000 during the year 1926, State Forester M. B. Pratt announced while approximately $60,000 was expended in extinguishing the blazes. This loss is exceeded only by that of 1924, and the number of fires is the largest on record. The forester declares. Reports for 1926 show that 3,117 fires occurred in California in 1926, burning over more than 1,200,000 acres.

Although a bill to prevent promiscuous cutting of Christmas trees by dealers and private individuals and dealers will be introduced at this session of the state legislature through the efforts of State Forester M. B. Pratt, residents of California will not be confronted with a treeless Yuletide by the provisions on the bill.

Products manufactured in the city of Fresno showed a 58.7 per cent increase in value in 1925 over 1923 with a total value of $36,391,159, according to figures compiled by the census bureau of the department of commerce.

Allen A. Cline, Yreka, pioneer prospector of Northern California, once took $37,000 in gold from a single pocket and made other rich finds. But when death called him at Yreka, at the age of 77, he had been in the county hospital for more than three years, penniless.

Coyotes have been preying on lambs and have taken their toll of the younger ones, according to sheep men in the Geyserville section. Dogs are a greater menace to the sheep than coyotes and will go miles to kill once they have tasted the sport.

Using his odd moments, Vernon Baird, 16-year-old Strathmore High school student, has completed a miniature airplane capable of running on its own power. The plane is equipped with a motor, self-starting system and weighs 125 pounds. Young Baird expended $15 on his ship which does not include the cost of his motor.

The electrically driven ferryboat, Fresno, designed for automobile traffic on San Francisco Bay, was launched in San Francisco with a big delegation of Fresno residents present. The boat was christened by Miss Shirley Harding of San Francisco, daughter of an executive of the Southern Pacific company, owners of the vessel, with a bottle of water brought from Fresno.

Preparation of fancy packs of California dried fruits by Fresno packers is growing rapidly into an important factor in the industrial life of Fresno, and during the past year the business transacted locally in this line amounted to $2,125,000, according to an article published in the current issue of Fresno County Facts, monthly publication of the Fresno County Chamber of Commerce.

Work upon the two capitol extension buildings at Sacramento will be resumed with the first money received from the bond issue for state buildings voted in November. This was decided by the state building bond board which, at a meeting recently held, authorized the immediate sale of bonds in the sum of $1,250,000 all to be used for the completion of the two buildings.

Based on statistics already compiled, officials of the Hollywood branch Los Angeles Realty Board, forecast another high record for building construction in 1927. These officials report a projected program of $12,000,000 in improvement valuation. Five buildings each valued at $1,000,000 or more, are planned for early ground breaking, it is said, while others are valued at from $20,000 up.

California's two penal institutions at Folsom and San Quentin are subjected to a penetrating analysis in a report of a nation-wide prison survey recently published by the National Society of Penal Information, Inc. The prison road camp system, made possible through the co-operation of the state prison board and highway commission and superintended by Ben H. Milliken, is effusively praised in several places in the book.

And the bell rings out again! Sacramento's most famous bell, which rung for many years in the belfry of the Congregational church, is again doing duty at the Pioneer Memorial church, newly erected edifice. The bell was cast in Troy, N. Y., in 1854, brought around Cape Horn in a windjammer, for the express purpose of calling the religiously inclined to meeting. It served other purposes, however, being used on the week days to gather the early day Vigilantes together. In this work it served its purpose, as four men were hanged after meetings called by the church bell.

Stockton construction engineers, who are to erect a hotel at Napa, announced that plans and specifications of the building are now ready, and that copies have been mailed to contractors in San Francisco, Oakland, Los Angeles and other coast cities, inviting bids.

A Japanese corporation, composed entirely of Oriental citizens of the United States, has been formed in Fresno, and a petition for articles of incorporation was approved. The organization, which is capitalized at $10,000, is called the American Growers and Shippers, Inc.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

President Justifies His Nicaragua Policy and Accuses Mexico.

EXPLAINING and justifying his Latin American policy, President Coolidge in a special message to congress related the events that have led up to the administration's action in the case of Nicaragua, and directly accused the Mexican government of promoting the revolution in that country that, he said, is endangering the lives and property of American citizens and the interests of the United States in Nicaragua—the latter being the canal route rights and the lease of a navy base on the Gulf of Fonseca. These rights and American investments, Mr. Coolidge asserted, placed a "peculiar responsibility" on the United States in Central America.

While disclaiming any desire of intervention in their internal affairs, the President declared that "the stability, prosperity, and independence" of the Central American republics can never be a matter of indifference to us," and served notice on President Calles of Mexico and, all others concerned that the United States will not tolerate "the jeopardizing of American interests" and impairment of constitutional government in that region.

"I have the most conclusive evidence," said President Coolidge, "that arms and munitions in large quantities have been on several occasions since August, 1926, shipped to the revolutionists in Nicaragua.

"Boats carrying these munitions have been fitted out in Mexican ports and some of the munitions bear evidence of having belonged to the Mexican government. It also appears that these ships were fitted out with the full knowledge of and, in some cases, with the encouragement of Mexican officials, and were, in one instance, at least, commanded by a Mexican naval reserve officer."

The President told of the starting of the revolution and the election of Adolfo Diaz as president-designate by the congress, arguing that that election was quite constitutional. On Wednesday Secretary of State Kellogg, appearing before the senate foreign relations committee, presented the same arguments, amplified the administration policy and then declared his department was in possession of documentary proof that the Mexican government had been active not only in arming the Nicaraguan revolutionists but also in plotting the bolshevik penetration of Central America to the injury of the United States.

Senator Borah, chairman of the committee, was unconvinced and made a long speech attacking the administration's policy. It was predicted in Washington, however, that the message and Mr. Kellogg's statement would serve to bring a majority of congress to the support of the President in the course he is pursuing. The house committee on foreign affairs also undertook an examination of the situation but spent much of its time in partisan squabbling.

Meanwhile efforts were being made in Nicaragua to bring about peace. Leading liberals proposed a conference and the conservatives seemed willing to hold such a meeting with Rear Admiral Latimer as arbitrator. Chamorro vetoed the plan but it seemed he might be ignored by a large faction of his party. Considerable reinforcements to the American naval forces in Nicaraguan waters were on their way, and Admiral Latimer established new neutral zones.

FROM the Mexican government came a denial, in general terms, of the accusations in President Coolidge's message concerning anti-American plotting in Central America. With this disclaimer was a suggestion that any American aggrieved by enforcement of the oil and alien land laws file a claim for compensation with the Mexican-American mixed claims commission instituted while Mr. Hughes was secretary of state.

However defiant he may seem to be, it is certain President Calles is not looking for trouble with the United States, for he has enough of that already within his own country. There was a new outbreak of Catholic uprisings in various regions in which scores were killed in street fighting and other scores were executed by the government. Bishop Pascual Diaz, secretary of the Catholic episcopate, and other prelates were arrested on charges of sedition, and Monsignor Diaz was taken to Vera Cruz, presumably to be exported. These arrests immediately followed the proclamation, issued in El Paso, Texas, of a state of revolution in Mexico, and the setting up of a government with Rene Capistrano Garza, a Catholic leader, as provisional president. Jose F. Gandara, "chief of military operations," said fifteen thousand rebels were under arms in Mexico, not including various independent groups in the south. Durango and other towns were reported captured by the revolutionists, and an American correspondent says the rebel bands are burning bridges and ranch houses, wrecking railways and generally harassing the government forces.

OVER in China, where our naval forces are active or ready to become so at need, matters seemed to have quieted down a little pending the expected movement of the Cantonese armies against Shanghai. The foreign authorities in that city have formally warned the Chinese against invading the foreign concessions and their police force and volunteer units have been ordered to keep them out by force of arms. Warcraft of the several foreign nations concerned, including the United States, are concentrating at Shanghai. Admiral Williams went from Manila on the U. S. S. Pittsburgh and resumed command of eight American destroyers already there, and Admiral Sir Reginald Tyrwhitt arrived to command the British squadron. All up the Yangtse, whence foreigners were fleeing, the anti-foreign feeling was growing stronger and the prospects for a serious conflict at Shanghai were good.

Eugene Chen, foreign minister of the Cantonese government, urges the United States to take no part in the opposition to the occupation of Shanghai by the Nationalist forces, saying the Cantonese would enter that city, not as conquerors, but as conservers of the work done by the foreigners during the last century. The British authorities in Hankow are reported to have demanded the speedy return of the British concession there. Representatives of the Peking government are said to have "suggested" that the foreign concessions in that city be handed over to the Chinese.

DEFEATED in all their efforts for a "big navy" except a provision for the construction of a new dirigible, the advocates of strong national defenses last week turned their attention to the War department supply bill, seeking to boost the budget bureau figures by about $8,000,000. Here is what they wanted to do:

1. To increase the army's enlisted personnel from 115,000 to 118,750.
2. To increase the daily ration allowance 5 cents a day per man.
3. To increase the allowance for the National Guard establishment by $800,000 and that for the officers' organized reserves by $400,000.
4. To provide increased funds for the reconditioning of the army transport grant and the purchases of 725 additional mules and 15,000 horses.
5. To provide $310,600 for the erection of sorely needed buildings at West Point.

The house committee rejected most of the budget bureau economies.

FULL indorsement of the new McNary-Haugen farm relief bill was laid before the house agriculture committee by four farm organizations—the American Farm Bureau federation, the Cotton Growers' exchange, the Corn Belt federation and the executive committee of twenty-two. In view of this organized action Chairman Haugen said his committee might not wish to consider further either the Aswell or Curtis-Crisp bills, particularly since the equalization fee, which has been the center of farm-relief controversy, was approved by a 13-to-6 vote.

OSTENSIBLY because of his connection with railway and coal companies, the appointment of Cyrus E. Woods of Pennsylvania to the interstate commerce commission was disapproved by the senate committee on interstate commerce by a vote of 8 to 6. The contest thus was transferred to the floor of the senate, where it was expected the senators from Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee and Kentucky would lead the opposition to Woods and those from Pennsylvania would support the nomination.

The committee held to be unfounded the charge, made by Senator Steck of Iowa, that Senator-elect Brookhart of Iowa had been a paid lobbyist for Woods. Mr. Steck already had withdrawn the charge.

THOROUGH investigation of reported graft and scandal in the operation of the "under cover" branch of the prohibition service will be made by the senate, which adopted a resolution to that effect introduced by Reed of Missouri. Mellon, Andrews and Blair are instructed to furnish all the correspondence in the department relating to the special agents, their orders and their expenditures. This inquiry is expected to bring out the facts concerning the operation by A. Bruce Bielaski of a speak-easy club in New York to trap bootleggers and patrons, and also concerning the reported operation of stills by dry agents.

GOVERNOR RITCHIE of Maryland, on his third inauguration, reaffirmed his stand for the rights of states against "encroachment of centralized federal government" and decried sumptuary laws regulating personal practices and relations. He didn't mention next year's Presidential campaign and its possibilities, but all through the hall were gold banners bearing the words: "Ritchie for President."

Governor Moore of New Jersey in his annual message advocated a state prohibition referendum and repeal of the state enforcement act.

GOVERNOR PINCHOT of Pennsylvania has refused to certify, in the usual form, the election of W. S. Vare as senator, according to a letter from him read to the senate. Certifying "that on the face of the returns Vare appears to have been chosen by the qualified electorate," Governor Pinchot expressed the opinion that his nomination was "partly bought and partly stolen" and that the election, as well as the primary, were tainted with frauds.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA may be relied on to keep the country supplied with scandals. Just as the Aimee Semple McPherson sensation died with the dismissal of the charges against her, Mrs. Charlie Chaplin began suit for divorce from the famous screen star, whom she accused of all sorts of things, including cruelty and infidelity. Charlie had left Los Angeles, whereupon a court there appointed receivers for all his property and his palatial residence and movie studio. Mrs. Chaplin in her bill estimated her husband's wealth at $16,000,000, of which she declared $10,000,000 is community property; from which it is seen that she will demand approximately $5,000,000 if a decree is granted.

DR. JULIUS CURTIUS, former minister of economics and member of the People's party, has been appointed chancellor of Germany by President von Hindenburg and is trying to form a new cabinet based on a coalition of the bourgeois parties. He has the support of Foreign Minister Stresemann, the chief figure today in German politics, but Berlin is skeptical about his prospects of forming a government that will stand up.

SEVENTY-FIVE children were killed and many others injured as the result of a blaze in a moving picture theater in Montreal. When the flames broke out the children rushed in panic for a door leading from a balcony, and in less than ten minutes the tragedy was over, most of the deaths being from smoke asphyxiation and suffocation.

Move in Michigan to Save "Hiawatha Land"

Four state parks in that section of Michigan's upper peninsula called Hiawatha land may be purchased by the state to preserve a share of the Indian country if a project under way by the state department of conservation is successful. The sites, now privately owned, are Tahquamenon falls, the Pictured Rocks, Porcupine mountains, in the vicinity of Ontonagon, and most unique of all, Kitch-it-i-ki-pi, the Big spring, which is situated near Manistique.

The immortal hunting grounds of Hiawatha, famed by Longfellow, have changed little since the red men roamed the woods. The advance of civilization has not marred the lonely silence, and a primeval hush protects its traditions.

It was Henry Rowe Schoolcraft, one time Indian agent at Mackinac island and Sault Ste. Marie, friend of the Ojibways, who detailed Indian life and lore to Longfellow.

To the northward broods the solemn and overwhelming majesty of Gitchi-Gumi, Big Sea Water, the mighty Superior. To the south stretch Michigan and Huron. Between these latter sparkles the northern jewel, the Fairy isle, called Michilimackinac by the Ojibways.

The Tahquamenon or "Black Water" falls are the largest of the northern falls, 50 feet in height and 200 feet wide. Far from the haunts of men, as yet, they are accessible only by river trip from Newberry.

Our Giant Airship Barn

ON THE prairie near Belleville, Ill., above the valley of the Mississippi river some miles east of St. Louis, is Scott field. This is Uncle Sam's army air base and air pilot school.

Here one is introduced to what unquestionably must be the world's record-breaking barn. This giant hangar is 810 feet long, 160 feet wide and 175 feet high. Its ponderous steel-reinforced and concrete-counterbalanced door, together with their electrically-controlled operating mechanism and tracks are said to weigh 750 tons per pair (there is one pair at either end) and require six minutes to open. The "catwalk" in this barn for airships is about 150 feet above the floor—a man swaying on it somewhat resembling a spider in a web.

Here one also sees many sorts of aircraft — aeroplanes, dirigible and semi-rigid dirigible airships, as well as supplies and repair parts therefor in abundance and variety. Nearby is a group of warehouses in which are stored stocks of "air" materials—ready for any emergency which might happen along unexpectedly.

To this great central air base many of Uncle Sam's air pilots are sent for training, it having gained the reputation of being the hardest and most heart-breaking air school in the world.

The hangars, barracks, storehouses, gas tanks, offices, officers' houses and commissary cover a quarter of a section. Headquarters' staff, faculty and students, commissioned officers and enlisted men are all under the command of a high officer of the service.

Harney Peak

HARNEY peak is the highest point between the Atlantic ocean and the Rocky mountains. It is located in the very heart of the famous Black hills of South Dakota.

This "king" mountain of the eastern half of these United States shoulders up above a mass of lesser heights which surround it and raises its barren, rocky crest to an elevation of 7,216 feet, or almost a mile and one-half above the level of the tides of the sea in a greeting to the stars in God's heaven.

The sides of this old sentinel of the north Middle West are studded with growths of timber and made up of rough, jagged ridges and peaks, gigantic and freakish-looking rocks, which the rains and the snows and the winds and the sun of centuries of time have eroded and fashioned into rare, odd and strange shapes. One large era is pointed and pinnacled in such a spectacular and grotesque manner that it has been dubbed "The Needles."

The lover of the rare in nature finds in the broad vista of landscape which spreads out in all directions from its summit like a map—peaks of lower altitude, pretty park-like places in fertile valleys, deep-sided canyons, rollicking streams, little glass-like lakes, picturesque towns, varied mining operations, the hog-back rim of the hills, prosperous farming communities, which stretch off into North Dakota, Wyoming and Nebraska, wonderfully impressive.

The Howard Eaton Trail

BORN in Pittsburgh, the late Howard Eaton—pioneer, sportsman, hunter, optimist and lover of God's great out-of-doors, answered the call of the West at an early age, when hunting buffalo and fighting hostile Indians were part of the day's work.

He died in 1922—a typical westerner, noted horseman and guide, unique in manner and speech, as favorably known in the famous hotels of New York city as in the great Rocky mountains of the West.

He reveled in the Yellowstone and laid out a horseback trail 157 miles long which traversed the wilds of this great natural wonderland, and yet touched all the major points of interest. This trail connected other paths and trails which penetrated regions inaccessible to vehicular traffic, making a total trail system of 700 miles, and is a great addition to the facilities for the public enjoyment of this great scenic domain. He traveled this trail scores of times.

After his death the park authorities assured preservation of the memory of this picturesque frontiersman by dedicating this trail to his memory.

Mr. Eaton was happiest perhaps when eastern city folk visited his ranch in the Big Horn mountains of Wyoming. He made them healthier and happier by thrusting them into such startlingly unusual surroundings that they promptly forgot their troubles and ills. He became, in a sense, a sort of official introducer of the West to the East. He loved to conduct a party of a hundred or more "tenderfeet," to whom his friendly hospitality held a strong appeal, through the strange mountain fastnesses anywhere between Canada and Mexico.

Measuring Hat Heat

During a heat wave in Paris recently a group of scientists held an investigation to find out how hot hats were. The experiments were made at a temperature of 97 degrees Fahrenheit. The sporting cap was found to be the hottest of all, with a heat beneath it of 98.6 degrees. The derby was next at 92 degrees. Felt hats showed only 86 degrees, and the stiff straw 79 degrees. The panama won over all with only 77 degrees—20 degrees cooler under the hat than outside.

Football Kickers Much Better Covered in 1926

Long runs with blocked kicks were scarce this fall, so well did the kicking elevens protect their kickers. The longest scoring run with a ball recovered after a blocked kick was a dash of 45 yards by Paul Hill of Bowdoin through New Hampshire. This performance is further worthy to head the list of these runs because it won the game in which it occurred. Biddison of Johns Hopkins made a touchdown after a run of 35 yards with a recovered blocked kick. Black of Bates in this manner scored upon Brown and Lohr of Wabash similarly crossed the goal line of Minnesota.

The majority, far and away, of scores with blocked kicks occur near the victim's goal line. This is because teams here really try to block. Hence the autumn list of touchdowns scored after runs of less than five yards are numerous. Among the most conspicuous are Sturhahn's score for Yale against Harvard; Gormley's touchdown for Georgetown against Fordham; Towle of Brown against Norwich. In this manner Ferrell of New Hampshire scored upon Colby, Barnhill of Tennessee upon Louisiana State; Brown of Illinois upon Coe; Collins of Canisius upon Niagara; Schmidt of Colgate upon Syracuse and Clemons of Florida upon Southern.

Says Gambling Greatest Menace to College Game

The greatest danger to college football is gambling, in the opinion of Chancellor C. W. Flint of Syracuse university.

At a banquet to the team he said gambling destroys sportsmanship and without sportsmanship college football cannot survive. Friendly wagers are just as harmful to the game as those laid by professional operators, he said, and he requested members of the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce to lend their assistance to the wiping out of the gambling instinct by not making any such wagers themselves and by discouraging their friends from doing so. Chancellor Flint and the team were the guests of the chamber of commerce.

New York Fighters Are Too Polite, Says Board

Politeness has been carried to extremes in New York rings, the state boxing commission has decided. In the future there will be no handshaking to interrupt the fray. Minor infractions of the rules, such as unintentional low punching, hitting with back of the hand and on breakaways, have called for so much politeness that boxers now are doing more handshaking than fighting, the board believes.

Referees hereafter will permit just two shakes, one before the mussing begins and the second when it is over.

"Let's have a little fighting for a change," said William Muldoon, senior member of the board.

Play Spring Series

A forecast of their pennant chances in the 1927 major league race may be revealed in the spring training of the Washington Nationals and the world champion St. Louis Cardinals. The two clubs will meet in a five-game exhibition series. The Nationals will battle the Cards at their training camp at Avon park, Fla., March 21 and 22, and the world champions will meet Washington at Tampa, March 29, 30 and 31. Other games will be played by the two teams.

Chinese Are Not Taking Much Interest in Sports

That the Chinese are not taking sufficient interest in sports, is the charge made by Dr. P. K. C. Tyau, former Chinese minister to Cuba, and once tennis champion of North China, who has been taking part in court contests in Pekin pending another official appointment.

"Sport among the Chinese is developing, but, considering the opportunities the present-day youth has, it is not progressing as satisfactorily as it should," he said in urging more contests among Pekin, Tientsin and other interport cities.

BILL CARRIGAN PLAYING AGAIN

Piloted Red Sox to Two Pennants, Then Retired.

William F. Carrigan, who piloted the Boston Red Sox to two successive world championships and then went back to his home town, Lewiston, Me., to lead the comparatively humdrum life of a banker, is in the harness again.

Bill accepted President Bob Quinn's offer of the managership after a five-minute conference. He was promised the highest salary ever paid a Boston manager, it is understood, although no official figure was made public.

Carrigan was the original boy manager when he succeeded Jake Stahl at the helm of the Red Sox in 1913.

Now at forty-three he will take up at once the reins relinquished by Lee Fohl, whose regime saw the once pennant-winning aggregation firmly entrenched in the cellar.

Carrigan first won big league attention by his work behind the plate for Holy Cross in 1906 and the same year saw him a regular with the Sox. He was farmed out the next season to Toronto, which then won the International league pennant.

When Lou Criger, the Red Sox catcher, broke his hand, Bill was made a regular. In 1913, when he was appointed manager, the team finished in fourth place.

The next year it was up in second, and in 1915 and 1916 the Sox not only carried off league honors, but whipped the Phillies and Dodgers, respectively, for the world title. Then Carrigan resigned.

During the heyday of his career he handled such stars as Ruth, Carl Mays, Dutch Leonard, Joe Wood, Ray Collins, Everett Scott and the famous outfield of Lewis, Speaker and Hooper.

Carrigan has held out against repeated offers to return to the big time. He was successful as a banker and theatrical man and a few years ago he retired to "loaf."

His contract now is for two years.

Sensational Victories Don't Decide Long Race

Sensational victories do not decide a long race. The New York Yankees won 24 of their games in the first, ninth or extra innings, but they won 67 in innings between the first and the ninth and they won the league championship.

St. Louis, winners of the National league title and the world championship, won only 19 games in the first, ninth or extra innings.

Of the games played by major league teams this year, 125 were won in the first inning, 112 victories came in the ninth and 105 were decided in extra innings. This represents about one in every four.

All of which may prove that ball games could be played in seven innings just as well as in nine, writes H. G. Salsinger in the Detroit News. The spectators might enjoy them better, especially in Detroit, where few games are ever played under two hours.

Giants to Don Tailless Shirts in 1927 Season

There will be a startling change in the uniforms of the New York Giants next season.

The announcement caused much consternation along baseball row until it was announced by Manager John McGraw that the tailless shirts would be securely fastened to the trousers by a series of loops through which the belt will run, and there will be no fear of a void around the waistline when a player makes a slide or a diving catch.

"Shirt tails are of absolutely no benefit," the players told McGraw. "They are always in the way."

So the tails have gone. Perhaps it is an insurance that the Giants won't be tail enders.

Howard Jones Unlucky

Dame Fortune has been most unkind this year to Coach Howard Jones of the University of California.

Conceded to have one of the greatest teams in the country, he lost his two big games with Stanford and Notre Dame by a one-point margin, the score in each instance being the same, 13 to 12.

Failure to make the point after touchdown proved fatal in each game. Incidentally, both of the U. of C.'s opponents came from behind to win.

Marks at West Point

Wallie Marks, captain of the University of Chicago football team, which failed to win a Big Ten game in the 1926 season for the first time in its history, hates to end his football career so disastrously, so he will try to get into the West Point Military academy. Marks played fullback this year behind a line too weak to give him any protection, and he is anxious to enjoy football for a few more years, without turning professional.

PEOPLE NOT TO BE DUPED

The response which has been given to rumors that this country might be involved in war with Mexico over oil lands held by American capitalists in that country would indicate that American men do not intend to sacrifice their lives in a war to save the bacon for the speculators. Nor do the American taxpayers look forward with pleasure to financing a campaign to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for the corporations. American capitalists should learn by the violent expression which has been given by the people against a war of aggression in Mexico, that Americans will not be made cats paws to line the purses of the captains of industry.

War is always expensive, and only those who went through the last war can realize what it really means in life, in suffering and privation. That the men who did go through this late war on the fields of Flanders do not want to repeat the experience on the sun-parched, cactus-studded deserts of Mexico is not to be wondered at.

In individual life justice and equity have taken the place of the war club and the broadsword, and courts mete out justice, instead of each individual taking his own means of retaliation, and the weak being ever subject to the desires of the strong. We had hoped that in national life we had approximated the same happy state. A great nation like the United States should be the first to advocate a policy which would make such a condition possible. Let us, therefore, show our greatness, not by a war of aggression against a less powerful neighbor with great oil resources, but let us rather guard our neighboring republic against the resource-grabbing monopolies which have made anti-trust laws necessary in this country. A protection for Mexico against American speculators would seem to us more proper than the guarding of the possessions of said speculators.

The entire situation, we believe, is well expressed in the remarks of Observer in the San Francisco Daily News, who writes as follows:

"Any person who has read the papers faithfully for the last 20 years or more, has deduced that, sooner or later, Big Business in the oil industry was going to have trouble in Mexico, and yell loudly for Uncle Sam to pull his chestnuts out of the fire. I saw it coming 10 years ago, and so did lots of other people. But in order to sheath the motive and conceal the movers, this fool Bolshevik matter has been hastily arranged as a camouflage. We all know who has such large interests in Mexico and wants help. Perhaps you are not allowed to state who, but I shall state it here, and you can blue pencil it if you must. William Randolph Hearst has immense oil interests in Mexico and now wants protection. But just look at the skill he is using. He is now innocently posing before the world as a great peace advocate—maybe he will even get the Nobel prize for his efforts for peace. Wouldn't surprise me at all if he did. But just look how he started this peace stuff quite some time ago. Well before this war talk began. Of course he did. He wanted a good alibi secured beforehand. A wise crack. But I ask you, are the American people going to be fooled into going into war, just to protect Hearst's oil wells, and the other friends' oil wells? Are they? When will the apathy of these American people be aroused to see who is handling them like sheep? Do you notice how litale the Hearst papers are saying about the prospects of war, and how carefully they are saying that little? They are siting pretty, waiting to see how it goes, before they venture. Are we going to let Hearst drag us into another war? Yes, I said "another." I meant just that. He made one war. I refer to the Philippine war. Why are the doings of multimillionaires covered up, protected, when if I steal $5, it would be broadcasted? How long is the United States going to be controlled by Big Business, even to the extent of giving lives in war, if requested? W. R. Hearst has always posed as a friend of the people and of the working man. But he is their greatest enemy, ready to sell them out at any moment to advance his private interests.

If we are dragged into a war with Mexico, it will be the worst thing that ever happened to the United States. Disgraceful, disgusting! Stop it, stop it, stop it!

MONDAY LAST DAY FOR AUTO REGISTRATION

The penalty period for motorists who have not secured their 1927 license plates starts next Tuesday. After midnight of Monday, January 31, when motor vehicle re-registration period ends, delinquents will be penalized by a doubling of the $3 registration fee for passenger cars and the higher fees for trucks and commercial vehicles. The law fixes a penalty of 100 per cent of the fee.

This was the admonition issued today by the California State Automobile Association which is assisting the State Motor Vehicle Department in renewal registration by issuing plates to its 70,000 members from 26 association offices in Northern and Central California. That there will be an unprecedented rush for the new maroon and cream colored plates in these last few days was the opinion expressed by George S. Grant, in charge of association plate issuance. Motorists have bee nunusually slow this year in applying for re-registration, he said, and offices issuing plates are threatened with an overwhelming flood of applicants Monday.

The plate issuance staffs engaged in the greatest task of its kind in the tsate's motor vehicle history, Grant pointed out, with California's record number of automobile owners—well over 1,600,000—renewing registration in the short space of 25 business days. Closing of the official registration period at midnight, January 31, Grant explained, means that motorists must have their applications in the hands of one of the offices of the Division of Motor Vehicles or the Automobile Association before the close of the business day Monday. Failing that, the only alternative to avoid the penalty is to have the application in the mail postmarked before midnight, January 31. The 1926 certificate of registration, containing the correct address and other data and properly signed, onstitutes an application under ordinary circumstances.

"Stand exactly where you are." Devon's voice was very quiet, but there was a quality in it which added to the icy chill of the night. "I know you're not alone, but if any of your pals shows himself, I'll shoot him dead. If you move or utter one word, or cry out, I'll kill you. Do you understand?"

Shaw did understand. The look in his protruding eyes proved that. Those eyes shifted wildly, turning this way and that, as if in search of the help which lurked among those spectral trees. He himself stood as motionless as one of them, and as he stood he moistened his thin lips with the tip of a trembling tongue.

"Now," said Laurie, "I'm going to have the truth. I'm going to have it all, and I'm going to have it quick. If you don't tell it, I'll kill you. Probably I shall kill you anyway. But first you will answer two questions. What power have you got over Miss Mayo? And what are you trying to do?"

Shaw hesitated. Again his protruding eyes turned wildly to the right and left, as if in search of help. Still holding the revolver in his right hand, Laurie slowly reached out his left and seized the other's throat in the grip of his powerful young fingers.

"Keep still," he warned, as the other started to raise his hands. "You think the game isn't up, but it is. Now talk, and talk quick."

He tightened his grip on the thick, slippery throat. "I'm enjoying this," he rasped. "If you were anything but the snake you are, I'd give you a fighting chance. But a creature that uses chloroform and hires three thugs to help him in his dirty jobs—"

He increased the pressure on the thick neck. Shaw's face began to purple. His eyes bulged horribly. He choked, and with the act gave up.

"Hold on," he gurgled. "Listen."

The pressure on his throat slightly relaxed. With eyes closed, he collapsed against the nearest tree trunk. Laurie followed him, expecting some treacherous move; but all the fight seemed out of the serpent. He was clutching at his coat and collar as if not yet able to breathe.

"I've had enough of this," he finally gasped out. "I'll tell you everything."

Even as he spoke, Laurie observed that one of the clutching, clawing hands had apparently got hold of what it was seeking.

Doris, feeling her way through the blackness of the storm on the unfamiliar country road, heard above the wind the sound of a sharp explosion which she thought meant a blown-out tire. She did not stop. Before her, only a short distance away, was the garage to which she was hastening and where she was to wait for Laurie. To go on meant to take a chance, but she had been ordered not to stop. There was a certain exhilaration in obeying that order. Crouched over the wheel, with head bent, and guessing at the turns she could not see, she pressed on through the storm.

CHAPTER XV

Burke Makes a Promise

Burke, dozing over the fire in his so-called office, was aroused from his dreams by the appearance of a vision. For a moment he blinked at it doubtfully. Then into his eyes came a dawning intelligence, slightly tinged with reproach.

Burke was an unimaginative man, who did not like to be jarred out of his routine. Already that day several unusual incidents had occurred; and though, like popular tales, they ended happily, they had been almost too great a stimulus to thought. Now here was another, in the form of a girl, young and beautiful, and apparently blown into his presence on the wings of the wild storm that was raging.

Somewhat uncertainly, Mr. Burke arose and approached the vision, which, standing at the threshold of his sanctum, thereupon addressed him in hurried but reassuring human tones.

"I've had a blowout," the lady briefly announced. "Will you put on a 'spare,' please, and take a look at the other shoes?"

This service, she estimated, would take half an hour of the proprietor's time, if he moved with the customary deliberation of his class, and would, of course, make superfluous any explanation of her wait in the garage, and of her nervousness, if he happened to be sufficiently observant to notice that.

It was really fortunate that the blowout had occurred. Surely within the half hour Laurie would have rejoined her. If he did not, she frankly conceded to herself, she would go mad with suspense. There was a limit to what she could endure, and that limit had been reached. Thirty minutes more of patience and courage and seeming calm covered the last draft she could make on a nervous system already greatly overtaxed.

Burke drew his worn office chair close to the red-hot stove, and was mildly pained by the lady's failure to avail herself of the comfort thus offered.

This, it will be remembered, was January, 1917, three months before America's entry into the World war, and women able to drive motors were comparatively rare. Any girl who could drive a car in a storm like this, and through the drifts of country roads—Mr. Burke, having reluctantly removed himself from the lady's presence, was now beside her car, and at this point in his reflections he uttered an exclamation and his jaw dropped.

"It's the lad's car!" he ejaculated slowly, and for a moment stood staring at it. Then, still slowly, he nodded.

It was the lad's car which, only a short time before, he himself had put in perfect order for a swift run to New York. Now this girl had it, but 't was easy to see why. He had been wrong in his college-prank theory. Here was something more serious and much more interesting. Here was a love affair.

As his meditations continued he was cursorily glancing at the tires, looking for the one that had sustained the blowout. He was not greatly surprised to find every tire perfect. There had been plenty of mysteries in the lad's conduct, and this was merely another trifle to add to the list. Undoubtedly the lady had her reasons for insisting on a blowout, and if she had, it was no affair of his. Also, the price for changing that tire would be a dollar, and Mr. Burke was always willing to pick up a dollar.

Whistling softly but sweetly, he removed a rear shoe, replaced it with one of the "spares" on the car's rack, and solemnly retested the others. The task, as Doris had expected, took him almost half an hour. When it was completed he lounged back to the lady and assured her that the car was again ready for service.

The lady hesitated. There was no sign of Laurie, and she dared not leave. Yet on what pretext could she linger? With the manner of one who has unlimited time at her disposal, she demanded her bill, a written one, and paid it. Then, checking herself on a casual journey toward the big coat, she showed a willingness to indulge in that exchange of friendly points of view for which Burke's heart had longed.

The exchange was not brilliant, but Burke made the most of it. No, he told her, they didn't often have storms as bad as this. One, several years ago, had blocked traffic for two days, but that was very unusual.

"Stand Exactly Where You Are!"

With a gallant effort at ease, the lady took up the theme of the storm and embroidered it in pretty colors and with much delicate fancy. When the pattern was getting somewhat confused, she suddenly asked a leading question.

"Which shoe blew out?"

Burke stared at her. He wished he knew what was expected of him. Did she want the truth, or didn't she? He realized that momentarily she was becoming more excited. He had not missed her frequent glances through the window, up the road, and he knew that for the past five minutes she had been listening for something wholly unconnected with his words. In reality Doris was in the grip of an almost unconquerable panic. What had happened? Why didn't Laurie come?

Burke decided to let her have the truth, or part of the truth.

"There wasn't no blowout," he stated, defensively.

"There wasn't! What do you mean?"

He saw that she was first surprised, then startled, then, as some sudden reflection came to her, actually appalled.

"I mean that there wasn't no blowout."

"No blowout? Then—then—what did I hear?" She asked the question of Burke, and, as she asked it, recoiled suddenly, as if he had struck her.

"P'raps you got a back-fire," he suggested, reassuringly. "You come down the steep hill up there, didn't you?"

Doris pulled herself together, shrugged her shoulders, and resolutely smiled at him. She knew the difference between the sound of a blowout and the backfiring of an irritated engine. But some abysmal instinct made her suddenly cautious, though with that same instinct her inner panic developed. What had she heard?

"I put on a 'spare,' anyway," Burke was saying. "The rear right looked a little weak, so I changed it."

He was tacitly explaining the bill he had submitted, but Doris did not hear him. What had she heard? Insistently the question repeated itself in her mind. She turned dizzily, and went back for the coat. As she did so she heard Burke's voice.

"Why—hel-lo!"

Even in that moment she observed its modulation. It had begun on a note of cheery surprise and ended on one of sharp concern. Turning, she saw Laurie.

"All ready?" he asked.

The remark was addressed to them both, but he looked at neither. There was an instant of utter silence during which they took him in, Burke with insistent, goggling eyes, Doris with one quick glance, soul-searching and terror-filled. Burke spoke first.

"What you been doin' to yerself?" he gasped.

The question was inevitable. Laurie was hatless and disheveled. His coat was torn, and across one pallid cheek ran a deep cut, freshly bleeding.

"Fell," he said, tersely.

He was breathing hard, as if he had been running. He had not yet looked at Doris, but now he abruptly swung into the little office and emerged, bringing her coat. Without a word, he held it for her. In equal silence, she slipped into it. He retrieved the cap from the pile of discarded garments still lying on the office floor, put it on, and indicated the waiting car.

"Get in," he commanded.

She obeyed and he followed her, taking his place at the wheel.

"You're hurt," she almost whispered. "Shall I drive?"

"No—Burke!"

The word was like a pistol shot.

"Y-yessir!" Burke was stammering. In his excitement he was hardly conscious that another bill had found its way into his hand, but his hand had automatically reached for and closed on it.

"Keep your mouth shut."

"Y-yessir."

"Keep it shut till tomorrow morning. You haven't seen anything or anybody at all today. Understand?"

"Y-yessir."

"After tonight you can talk about me all you like. But you're to forget absolutely that you ever saw the lady. Is that clear?"

"Y-yessir."

"Thank you. Good-by."

He started the car and swung it out into the storm. As it went Burke saw the girl catch the boy's arm and heard something that sounded partly like a cry and partly like a sob.

"Laurie!"

"H-ush!"

The car was tearing through the storm and drifts at fifty miles an hour, and this time it was headed down the road for New York.

Burke's eyes followed it, as far as he could see it, which was not far. Then he retreated to the "office," and, dropping heavily into his desk chair, stared unseeingly at a calendar on the wall.

It was a long moment before he remembered to open his hand and look at the bill he was holding. As he did so his eyes widened. The bill was a large one. With a quick look around him, he thrust it into his pocket.

"I ain't really seen nothin'," he muttered, "an' I ain't sure of nothin', anyhow."

* * * * * * *

"What has happened? Oh, Laurie, what has happened?"

For a time Laurie did not answer. Then she felt rather than saw his face turn toward her in the darkness.

"Doris."

"Yes."

"Will you do something for me?"

"Yes, Laurie, anything."

"Then don't speak till we reach New York. When we get to your studio I'll tell you everything. Will you do that?"

"But—Laurie—"

"Will—you—do—it?" The voice was not Laurie's. It was the harsh, grating voice of a man distraught.

"Yes, of course."

Silence settled upon them like a substance, a silence broken only by the roar of the storm and the crashing of wind-swept branches of the trees that lined the road. The car's powerful searchlights threw up in ghostly shapes the covered stumps and hedges they passed and the great masses of snow that beat against them. Subconsciously the girl knew that this boy beside her, driving with the recklessness of a lost soul, was merely guessing at a road no one could have seen, but in that half-hour she had no thought for the hazards of the journey. Her panic had grown till it filled her soul.

Once, in a frantic impulse of need of human contact, she laid her hand on the arm nearest her, over the wheel. The next instant she withdrew it with a shudder. For all the response she had found she might have touched a dead man. Something of the look of a dead man, too, was in the boy's face and eyes as he bent forward, motionless as a statue, his features like stone and his eyes as unhuman as polished agate, staring fixedly at the road before them.

It was on a stretch of road through the woods that the obsession in her mind took its final and most hideous form. Close behind them, and ringing in their ears, she fancied she heard a cry in the voice of Shaw. It was not Shaw's human voice. She would not have known it in a human world. It had passed through the great change; but it was recognizable, because she, too, had passed through some great change. Recognizable, too, was the sound of Shaw's running feet, although she had never heard them run, and though they were running so lightly on top of the snow.

He was just behind them, she thought. If she turned she knew she would see him, not as she had known him, plump, sleek, living and loathsome, but stark, rigid and ready for his grave, yet able to pursue; and the new, unearthly light of his bulging eyes seemed burning into her back.

She groaned, but the groan brought no response from the tense figure beside her. The only sounds were the howls of the wind, the frenzied protests of the tortured trees, and the fancied hail of a dead man, coming closer and closer.

ADDS CHARM TO VELVET HAT; GORGEOUS EVENING WRAPS

UNDER the magic touch of scissors, behold the erstwhile "simple little felt" take on the airs of a "dress-up" chapeau. Perhaps the fetching felt models in this picture will best tell the story of what is being accomplished through the cunning of scissor art as employed by the milliner.

By cutting a felt hood in deep points and bringing it down over a felt foundation of blended coloring the result is a chic and charming hat as shown first in this group.

A featured trimming of the late-winter felt hat is metal brocade. For the attractive chapeau shown in the upper right corner of this "nifty" felt collection a muchly "scissored" crown is posed over a colorful metal brocade brim and side crown with charming effect.

The gleam of silver cloth through the artistic cut-out work which distinguishes the hat with the ripple brim in this picture glorifies felt in a most enchanting way.

Then there is that handsome basket-woven hat posed to the right in the illustration. To accomplish this the felt shape is slashed diagonally around the entire side crown. Strips of felt in contrasting color are then interwoven as you see. Metal ribbon or velvet thus interworked would be equally as effective.

Not even the humble felt hat has escaped the influence of the vogue for beaded embellishment. Very cleverly is a wide grosgrain ribbon "starred" with cut steel nailheads in the model shown last in the group. The idea is unique and charming as well.

It is interesting to note that metallic bandings, almost always woven ribbons, enhance the felt hats which are being accorded a conspicuous place in winter resort millinery. Novelty creasings and handsome colorings add newness to incoming felt models.

A touch of straw braid characterizes latest felt hats for midseason wear. The very narrow straw beading is patterned very interestingly on the felt background. This gives opportunity for charming color effects. The promise is for many unique combinations of not only straw and felt, but straw and fabric as well.

While the style calendar is "rushing" the coming of spring, society's midseason festivities are keeping on with unabated enthusiasm. Which means that women of fashion are still centering their thoughts on pretty clothes tuned to late winter dance, dinner and theater parties.

In this era of the limousine and the taxi the handsome evening wrap finds a very proper setting. For formal wear, milady is expressing preference for gorgeous velvet coats or capes such as are pictured herewith.

From the atelier of Jean Magnin comes the charming theater coat of ruby velvet shown to the left. It is cut along surplice lines with long deep sleeves emblazoned with silver braid. A long scarf is attached to the right shoulder and ends in a festoon of brilliants.

The cape, as an evening wrap, has become an item of genuine importance. Silver-gray velvet embroidered in shaded tones of gray and blue was selected for the developing of the lovely cape in the picture, which, by the way, is a French creation. Sable in conjunction with beautiful shaded gray willow ostrich trims this lovely costume.

For evening wear in the Southland where "summer spends the winter" come direct from Paris adorable capes of white velvet hand-painted in all-over futurist designs and colorings.

Quilted matelasse, whose floral pattern is traced with gold-thread stitchery, is a newly arrived coating designed for the spring and summer formal wrap, but whose debut is taking place among fashions for Southern resort wear.

It is said also that the taffeta wrap elaborately garnitured in plaitings, pinked edges and shirring will take its place among the near-future fashions.

Fur as a trimming for the spring coats meets with the mode's approval.

Two Winter Evening Wraps.

"W" Neck Is the Latest

The "W" neck is the latest example of alphabetical style in English evening frocks. It is an amusing variation of the V-shape and U-shape necks and is being used on a large number of this season's dinner dresses, particularly those made from black velvet.

Beads Are Popular

Beaded frocks for evening show close patterns, and beading and embroidery are often combined.

For Office Wear

The considerable adoption of sports dresses for office wear suggests that business women find that the simplicity of the sports frocks makes it appropriate for business, while its good style satisfies a desire for smartness.

Jungle Green Popular

A dark shade of green known as jungle green is much in evidence in present fashions. It is unusually effective when used for millinery and wraps developed in velvet.

Popular San Diego Woman Recovers From Long Illness

Amazing Improvement in Mrs. Jester's Health Surprises Friends. Serious Ailments Caused by Nervous Breakdown Relieved and Strength Restored by Tanlac. Looks and Feels Better Than Ever

"Tanlac has certainly done wonders for me; I cannot praise it enough," declares Mrs. T. D. Jester, 1268 Pennsylvania Avenue, San Diego, Calif. "I had suffered a nervous breakdown, and for many months afterward I continued to get worse and worse, despite all the different nerve medicines I tried. Nothing seemed to help until I tried Tanlac.

"I was as near to being a complete nervous and physical wreck as I could be, without entirely collapsing. The slightest noise would make me want to scream, and after retiring it would be hours before I could sleep. I would awaken with terrible nervous headaches and the slightest exertion would tire me out so that I would be trembling. I lost weight and appetite. I tried Tanlac with little expectation of improvement.

"Before I had taken all of the first bottle, I developed a ravenous appetite, and was sleeping better. I continued to improve rapidly and felt like a different person entirely. In less than three weeks I had gained seven pounds! Later, my weight went up from 105 to 125 pounds."

Drink Water If Kidneys Bother

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts If Back Pains or Bladder Is Irritated

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

News of Menlo Park

To Pass Summer in Menlo Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Witter have taken the John G. Suton house at Menlo Park for the coming summer. The Suttons will pass several months in Europe.

Mr. Sutton is he manager of the new Dumbarton bridge and one of the largest stockholders of the bridge company.

Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., was admitted to practice before the supreme court of the United States at Washington last week on motion of his father, Senator Shortridge, who many years ago was himself admitted to practice law before that august tribunal. Senator Shortridge made felicitous address in making the motion which was promptly granted by Chief Justice Taft with a gracious smile.

A commitee has been appointed by the ladies of the Church of the Nativity to prpare for the annual St. Patrick's Day celebration. The committee is working with a view to make the forthcoming celebration the best ever taken place in Menlo Park. Talent is being secured from the Orpheum circuit in San Francisco for the occasion. Irish dances, folk lore and songs ever dear to the Irish heart will be sung and the program is to be complete with interesting numbers. The entertainment is to take place on Wednesday evening, March 16. Remember the date.

Old Mother Nature is again playing pranks in this locality. The beautiful acasia tree on the property of W. E. Dale on Oak Grove avenue is in full bloom attracting the admiration of passersby. Last year it did not send forth its pretty blooms until April. She is a wise old lady, this Mother Naure. She desires, perhaps, to pierce the gloom caused by the recent unsettled weather.

Menlo Parlor, W. D. G. W., installed officers for the ensuing term on Monday. D. D. G. President Dora Wilson officiated. The following officers were installed: P. Pres., Grace Loverich; Pres., Mathilda Struz; 1st Vice-Pres., Marie Maloney; 2nd Vice-Pres., Mary Worrell; 3rd Vice-Pres., Mary Grill; Marshal, Florence Carroll; Fin. Secy., Gertrude Kavanaugh; Rec. Secy., Frances Maloney; Treas., Catherine Derry; Organist, Isabel Linquist; Outside Sentinel, Laura Bartels; Inside Sentinel, Eva Urban; Trustees, Catherine Carroll, Adaline Blanchard and Catherine Kavanaugh. P. Pres. Grace Loverich was presented with a jeweled past president's ring, and D. D. G. P. Dora Wilson was given a beautiful glass dish. A ravioli supper was enjoyed by all and singing and speeches followed.

The rainfall for the season is nine inches as against 4.20 inches at this time last year.

The business men in town are are about to organize a merchants' association, the membership of which will be confined to bona fide merchants. The new organization is to urge the proposition of having Menlo Park merge with Atherton. There are others who want to be annexed to Palo Alto, while still others desire to have the town incorporated. There are, however, a great number who would prefer to be joined to the great metropolis of San Francisco. Which shall it be? That's the problem the people of Menlo Park will have to wrestle with now.

Fred Nessler returned from a two weeks' vacation spent in Los Angeles, his former home, and where he was chief of the fire department of that city in the nineties.

House Peters will appear in "Combat;" comedy, "Movieland," in the New Menlo Theatre this evening. Sunday and Monday evenings Dorothy Gish in "Nell Gwyn Grimes," comedy, "When East Meets West;" Tuesday night, amateur night, "Up State," comedy, "Upper Cut;" Wednesday evening, comedy, "Picking Peaches;" Thursday, "Sea Wolf," comedy, "The Love Bug;" Friday evening, "The Escape," comedy, "From Rags to Breeches."

Miss Sadie Frey owner of property on the highway formerly known as the goat ranch, is planning to establish an up-to-date auto camp on the property. Miss Frey plans to erect a building of five units supplied with all modern conveniences. She also is to erect a large garage so that individual cars will be taken care of. This enterprise is certain to meet with success as there are very few modern auto camps on the peninsula.

Willow Road, the official road to Dumbarton bridge, is receiving much attenion lately. The property owners abutting upon he thoroughfare have agreed to give the county a strip of eleven feet in order to straighten it and doing away with the sharp curves. This road may be improved at once. The Palo Alto Chamber of Commerce and the Menlo Park Chamber of Commerce are interesting themselves in the road as it is the main artery to both Palo Alto and Menlo Park. This highway will have to take care of the vast travel off the bridge and should be placed in good condition.

The postoffice here was broken into some time Wednesday night by unknown parties. The culprits entered by a rear door, but failed to secure an entrance to the main portion of the office where the money and stamps were kept. It is possible that the thieves were scared off by some noise on the outside of the building, or maybe by the passing of the nightwatchman in making his rounds. Almost annually this office is robbed and invariably during the winter months.

One of the stores in the American Trust Company's building on the state highway was leased for a term of three years during the week to an experienced restauranteur of San Francisco. He is to conduct a high class restaurant.

W. E. Monroe, the local real estate man, reports the sale of a house and lot on Alameda and Cedar streets, and also the sale of five parcels of land on Cedar street. The lease of the D. B. Hampton home to F. O'Brien of the Ford Motor Company. Mr. Monroe reports the inquiry for Menlo Park property to be very encouraging.

A. I. Coffey, the local architect, has been appointed to erect a new police station for the City of San Francisco to cost about $100,000. It is to be similar to the Southern Police station erected last year on Fourth street. Mr. Coffey has also been appointed by the Mountain View Grammar school trustees to prepare plans for a new grammar or grade school building. The structure is to cost $165,000.

W. E. Dale, the local grocer, met with a painful accident at Redwood City Thursday evening. While on his way from San Francisco to his home in Menlo Park his machine collided with a trailer behind a heavy truck. Mr. Dale was thrown out and severely bruised. He was taken to the community hospital for treatment. Yesterday afternoon he returned to his home here.

Roy W. Cloud, city superintendent of schools, was the speaker last Tuesday at the Kiwanis Club in Palo Alto.

Speaking of Pro

—a fitting proverb of the business world would be: "An immediate answer forms a multitude of business complications."

Modern business depends largely on speed, accuracy, quick decisions, immediate information and close contact with customers for its efficient and successful operation.

When speed is a factor or when an immediate answer is necessary—Long Distance Telephone Service stands ready to carry your message to ANYONE, ANYWHERE, AT ANYTIME.

Many new and practical uses of Long Distance are no doubt applicable to your business. These will be cheerfully discussed with you upon request to the business Office of the Telephone Company.

Long Distance combines speed with accuracy

HIS BIG MOMENT

It is a memorable day for the new man when first he dons his apron and starts to work in one of our stores or markets. He has started up the ladder of "success through service" and knows that the rapidity of his climb will depend upon his own willingness to work and apply the things he is taught. Combined with a natural love for his chosen work, the known certainty of earned reward is a spur to his maximum effort and application at all times.

These are some of the reasons why you always find Safeway Men ready and anxious to do all they can to make your shopping in our stores a pleasant and profitable.
